In the mid-1960s, UTSA assembled a multi-disciplinary team of faculty and staff to initiate the development of a new graduate program in the Social and Behavioral Sciences. The team, under the leadership of Executive Vice President and Provost John R. Williams, prepared proposals for funding from the state legislature. State funding ultimately was granted by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board to create the Master of Social Work (MSW) program, one of the first in the country. Work on the program began in September 1967, when four of the original 12 faculty members were hired. Work on the program began in September 1967, when four of the original 12 faculty members were hired. The MSW was established as one of the first professional degrees to be granted by a junior, four-year college. In addition to providing coursework from the social sciences, the MSW includes the six-credit Master's in Social Work practicum, which requires a two-year experience with an approved social service agency. Upon completion of the Master's program, the student may apply for certification as a social work practitioner. In the mid-1980s, the MSW, which had been offered annually for more than 10 years, was discontinued. In 2005, a new MSW program was established as part of UTSA's new degree-granting Baccalaureate/Master's in Business program and named after Charlotte Olson Reed, a long-time
