C-reactive protein and interleukin-6 in the pathogenesis of endometriosis. To investigate whether and to what extent inflammatory changes influence the pathological processes of endometriosis. Prospective observational study. Tertiary medical centre. Seventy-one patients with endometriosis and 68 healthy controls. Levels of C-reactive protein (CRP), interleukin-6 (IL-6), interleukin-1beta (IL-1beta) and tumour necrosis factor alpha (TNF-alpha) in serum were measured using enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA). Intestinal epithelium was investigated using enteroglial markers and interleukin-2 receptor alpha (IL-2Ralpha) messenger ribonucleic acid (mRNA) expression by real-time reverse transcriptase-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR). Serum CRP and IL-6 levels were significantly higher in the control group than in the endometriosis group. In the endometriosis group, there was a significant relationship between serum CRP and the site and grade of endometriosis. In contrast, there was no correlation between the levels of IL-6 and severity of endometriosis. Intestinal epithelium was invaded by endometrial tissue in both epithelial and stromal cells. The expression of IL-2Ralpha mRNA was increased significantly in endometriosis compared with controls. These findings suggest that there is an association between the severity of endometriosis and CRP, and this may be due, at least in part, to the permeation of endometrial tissue into the abdominal cavity and immune responses.
