Let's say you want to make it so that it has a completely different design and uses completely different materials. That's the idea behind the Make your own phone app for Android and iOS. The idea is that you are given all the components you need to assemble a phone of your own design. You can then add as many of your own parts as you like to it. However, there are some rules you need to follow, such as not being able to add anything that would be dangerous to children. You can watch a video demonstration of how to create your own phone here: You can also follow the instructions on the make your own phone app. If you want to learn more about what parts you can and cannot add to your phone, then the links below will explain it for you: Have

This program is a simulation of light passing through a customizable lens and interacting with a mirror. It's easy to use, and can be used to teach both, mathematics of light interactions, and physics. This program offers two simulations, and they can be run separately or simultaneously. A basic simulation can be initiated by placing a lens at center and a mirror at the bottom-right corner. Letting rays pass through the main window can be initiated by putting a lens with any of the four sides at center, but as soon as a corner is placed at bottom-right corner, the mirror appears and catches all rays. The program offers a possibility to add, and remove layers with a button. This program is very easy to learn, and can be used for a wide variety of tutorials.
