What's New In Vegas Pro Production Assistant?

This Vegas Pro tutorial is for workgroups that have a number of video projects that need to be edited in a similar manner, and share video. You should have a Windows-based workstation or file server that will act as the "Rendezvous" of the group. One or more workstations can be synchronized to this workstation. You should have Project Sharing turned on. A professional "rendezvous" point for your Vegas Pro Projects Project files can be transferred to the "Rendezvous" server if you want to have your video projects accessible by other workstations. You can opt to share folders or hard drive folders. The files are then accessible from your computer and all other members' computers. You can change permissions on the folder or on the individual files to allow other workstations to access files. Vegas Pro allows you to send video files, or entire folders, to the Rendezvous. The video files can be present in your project storage (where you have placed them to edit them) or on your hard drive. Vegas Pro will send only the files that have changed since the last synchronization to the rendezvous. It does not send the entire folder structure. Follow these steps to synchronize your files with a workstation. Note: The workstation that you want to synchronize with must have a full version of the Vegas Pro Video Editor installed. If you are performing the synchronization from a computer that does not have a full version of Vegas installed, you will not be able to synchronize to that workstation. The reason is that some functionality of the video editor is not included in a trial version of the software. You will have a number of options on this workstation. You can press the F1 key for help, or refer to the Help documentation on the menu system. You will also have the standard Windows dialogues to choose from: a file, a folder, multiple files and a folder, and a list of files (which you can choose from). If you are using folders, you can use any of the below: Pressing the hotkey for Add will add video files from the project to the Rendezvous. Pressing the hotkey for Remove will remove video files from the Rendezvous. Pressing the hotkey for Display will display the current items being synchronized. Pressing the hotkey for Sort will allow you to re-sort the files being synchronized.
