2-Methyl-4-benzoyl-5-methoxyphenyl-2H-1,4-benzothiazine-3-carboxylate, a novel selective inhibitor of murine brain cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase. 2-Methyl-4-benzoyl-5-methoxyphenyl-2H-1,4-benzothiazine-3-carboxylate (N-phenylbenzamide) is a new and potent inhibitor of murine brain cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase. It has a K_i for human brain cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase of 50 ± 9 nM as compared to 690 ± 80 nM for calf thymus cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase. The interaction of N-phenylbenzamide with brain cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase is mutually exclusive with cyclic GMP-dependent protein kinase. N-Phenylbenzamide, like staurosporine, inhibits calmodulin-stimulated human brain cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase activity ($K_i = 90 \pm 15$ nM). Inhibitory activity of N-phenylbenzamide against human blood cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase is not affected by calcium or calmodulin. N-Phenylbenzamide, when incubated with human and murine blood cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase, does not activate these enzymes in a time course experiment. These findings indicate that N-phenylbenzamide is a substrate selective inhibitor of brain cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase.

What's New In?

Now that's something new. Police have identified a man accused of murdering a woman and her 18-month-old son in a gruesome stabbing attack that occurred in broad daylight on a busy Brooklyn street. Frederick Dolejs, 20, allegedly killed Marline St. Jacques, 28, and her boy, Caleb, on West 23rd Street near Eighth Avenue around 2:30 p.m. Saturday, cops said. St. Jacques was a single mom of three — including Caleb — and was just in the neighborhood to drop off a bag of groceries, according to the Daily Mail. She was killed by a single stab wound to the neck and Caleb was found dead just five feet from his mother's body with a stab wound to the head and neck, cops said. Dolejs was arrested at the scene and was charged with murder as a hate crime, according to officials. He appeared in court on Monday for an arraignment. "This was a shocking and horrendous act," Brooklyn District Attorney Eric Gonzalez said. "It is even more upsetting when you come face to face with the homicide victim." Neighbor Mary Feliciano said the mom was always "so sweet." "There was a baby in the house with a baby seat, she had a kid, he even came out and said hi," she told the Post. "It's just terrible. This is all so senseless." Neighbors described Dolejs as a family man who "walks the dog" and spends time in the park with the couple's young boy. "He was a nice kid, he was a nice guy," she said. "He walks the dog, the dog's with him all the time," said another neighbor, who described the suspect as a "nice guy," and denied that the two were in a relationship. "He lives there," the man added. "He said he was married, just married." Cops said the attack might have been triggered by a fight between the couple. But the police probe into the crime is still in its early stages. No one has been charged with the stabbing. Careful inspection of the oil spills that regularly occur in the Gulf of Mexico reveals a distinct
