New York's plan to transition its Medicaid program to managed care provides an opportunity for hospitals to provide services in a more efficient and effective way for Medicaid beneficiaries. However, the plan may limit access to care for Medicaid beneficiaries unless hospitals fully understand and comply with state regulations. This article provides recommendations for health care providers and hospitals to avoid penalties for noncompliance and to ensure that the services they provide are consistent with Medicaid regulations. Dopamine D1-like receptor stimulation enhances, while D2-like receptor stimulation inhibits, the potassium conductance in substantia nigra neurons. Dopamine D1-like receptors (D1Rs) and D2-like receptors (D2Rs) co-localize in the basal ganglia and the neurotransmitter dopamine
