Prosody in psychiatric voice audiometry: a preliminary evaluation of the diagnostic orientation. The present study was designed to test the hypothesis that prosody is the critical variable for establishing a diagnosis of voice impairment in psychiatric patients. A group of 24 young adult male patients with nonpsychotic major depression (n = 17) and schizophrenia (n = 7) participated in this study. The control group included 25 young adult male volunteers. During a single session, all subjects were recorded on videotape, while reading "Alice in Wonderland" in a continuous, uninterrupted manner. Subsequently, a panel of 5 judges established the final diagnosis of voice impairment of each subject, based on both the voice reading and videotape viewing for each subject. In addition, each subject's speech behavior was rated on a 5-point scale and the subjects received a voice handicap index score on a 100-point scale. A statistically significant difference was found between the two diagnostic groups for the variables of number of intonation breaks, mean pitch, duration of pauses, average loudness, and pause-to-utterance proportion. There was no significant difference between the two diagnostic groups for total speech ratings, double phonations, and total masking. These findings support the hypothesis that prosody may be used as an important variable to support or rule out a diagnosis of voice impairment in psychiatric patients.Video! I've been scanning through the Vista forum finally surfacing to some of my old posts and I'm finding some old gems. I'd like to share one with you. I'm using voice-to-text for the Vista Beta and I was able to create a macro which automatically inputs my opening line. I'll save you the time of forcing it and then adding my closing line. This is what you type from the Windows 7 Start menu and it will launch the New and Video option.

Virtual Reality Cinema Virtual Reality Cinema (VRC) was an American VR film studio based in San Diego, California. Founded in 1995 as a spin-off of the Foundry Films, the company produced and released many 3D computer generated virtual reality films and games, including animation, anime, live action, and documentary film. The official company name was established as "Virtual Reality Cinema, Inc" on August 9, 1995 (citing "Inc" as the required explanation). VRC did not produce any actual films; instead, its films were "experiences" that required plug-ins on Windows machines and virtual reality headsets. It was reported that the company provided film-quality animated stereoscopic scenes and initially claimed to have done so, but was later unable to deliver. After little revenue generation, the entire VRC team was laid off in 2000. History VRC was founded in 1995 by four former members of the Foundry Films
