Space satellites often use solar panels to convert sunlight into electricity that is stored in batteries or other storage devices. After the storage devices are charged, they provide electricity to the electrical circuits on the satellite that enable the satellite to perform its assigned tasks. Photovoltaic cells are commonly used in solar panels and generate electricity when exposed to light energy. As the efficiency of photovoltaic cells increase, the power generated by the cells increases as well. However, the maximum power output that photovoltaic cells can produce at a given cost and in a given size is limited. As a result, there remains a need for more efficient photovoltaic power systems.Thinking in Policy Thinking in Policy is a quarterly peer-reviewed academic journal covering the study of public policy, especially the British context. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device and a semiconductor device, in particular, relates to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device including a non-volatile memory and a semiconductor device. 2. Description of Related Art In general, metal, such as aluminum, or an alloy thereof, is used as a conductive material for wiring of a semiconductor device. However, it has been pointed out that metal, such as aluminum, or an alloy thereof, has low resistance with respect to electromigration. In view of this, various research and development have been carried out on a barrier layer, which does not contain metal, that is
