Works The Road To Top Gear: A Podcast Tells The Story... If this podcast sounds familiar to you, then that's not by accident. The podcast that I host is called The Road To Top Gear. And the funny thing is... that was a first! I did some early research and found that although a lot of podcasts have been recorded about Top Gear over the years, it was the only one that didn't actually have a proper roadmap. It sort of appeared out of thin air. And then something funny happened. Podcasts got HUGE... and they started asking questions. So it's time to start thinking about what might happen next. Anyway. In the original Road To Top Gear I wrote about the first 5 years. Then I called a few guest contributors, asking them to write about the car show from the time they first heard about it. I have now got enough material to fill a second series, so we're going to start to finish another 6 months of history. And it'll be another round of stories, laughs and more. That means that this is just the beginning. Now the only question is... do we like this game? We'll find that out with you, over time. But if you want an idea of what is in store, there are a couple of new writers to announce: Alex Roberts of long time Top Gear fansite Bitnapped, and World Tours. Both have written about the show for a long time. But what they have in mind is a bit new. Alex will look at the show's influence on the wider range of automotive blogs. And World Tour is going to write about the decision making going into a new era. We're starting with the present and ending with the future of The Top Gear. Go over the top and join us; we've set up a Patreon page to raise funds. Sound Resonates In Our Midsts And Anyway... Many of you will be well aware of the plans that we have been mulling over for some time. A definitive plan to bring us back to screens as a brand in September 2016. So today, we are somewhat excited to announce that we are able to reveal to you our first image as a unified, new and exciting concept. We've given the title of the vehicle we'll be producing: Now there aren't any words to describe the AW14 Range Rover yet, but expect a

It's time to build your own city, but you need workers and resources to do that. The orders have been delivered, and the steppe has been opened up for development - now you need to find them. You don't have to be a wizard. To build a city you need: access to workers and resources.

Think of yourself as a cartographer, a cartographer who does his work on the warm back of a camel. You go where the work is and hence the resources. Unless you are insane you know that there are mines, forests, lakes - these are great places to start. Before long you will have built a city - a small one, but it's yours. The path to victory is the path of the cartographer. Find the resources and build your city.

To find the resources and build your city you need:

- There are ships that collect resources for you, and they deliver too
- To stop your enemy, you need soldiers, and where there are soldiers there are mines
- More soldiers make you strong
- More mines make your city grow

You are the best cartographer of them all. Your maps are the land and the oceans. They are the paths through the lands. Soon the first victory will be won, and your empire on this strange planet will only grow. Resources and workers are your two best allies. During the game you will find a lot of way to find these resources, a lot of creatures to do your tasks and a lot of campaigns to accomplish. But none of this will be a problem for you. You will know what to do. Because of these resources and your full set of abilities, you will probably conquer other players and rule them.

Workers & Resources: Soviet Republic is a fantasy-meets-city-building game mixed with a new resource-management
