Tom Walker was working as a security guard in the Nirvana Facility, near San Francisco, when the gravity shifts started going on. A big earthquake, before travelling away, had caused some sort of gate, to suddenly appear in the facility. All he can see are corridors, and in the middle of them, he is the only survivor. No one knows why the others were evacuated, and there are no signs of life anywhere in the facility. In the facility, he talks with Dr Lestrade, who explains the gravity shifts as phenomena which can destabilize space-time, and has come to him to help them understand how they work. There are various tests which can be used to put the pressure on gravity, forcing it to manifest itself differently, and also to find other ways to manipulate it. Tom has to use all this to travel the facility, solving puzzles and discovering more about the changes in the gravity. Features: • Adventure game, following the story of Tom Walker • 3,5 hours of gameplay • 3 difficulty levels, from simple to challenging • over 20 puzzles, designed to make you think • 3 types of puzzles: Logic, Time, Space • 2 types of objects: Objects and Weapons • 2 Achievements Highlights: - Puzzles: you must think before moving on, and solve each puzzle with different approaches and different tools, in order to progress and not get stuck. - Weapons: you will be given guns, that can interact with gravity in different ways. There will be some that can move heavy objects, create anti-gravitational spheres, or teleport people and objects.Q: How to wait for ajax to finish before continuing I'm writing a little form that (...) Takes a number from the user (using a textbox) Create a php script that checks the database to see if there is already a number for that number and returns a yes or no, based on whether there was a number or not. If there was a number, then return a Yes. If there wasn't a number then call the function recursively until it does. The problem that I'm having is that I've got a big form where most fields update on their own, but some require values from other fields, so I've used the following form (...): $(".terms").change(function(){ if (this.value === ""){ c9d1549cdd

What's new in Roman Empire Wars:

Review The finest VR tech is already in your pocket: GearVR. For the last few years, the Oculus ecosystem has dominated the virtual reality (VR) space, and a lot has changed when it comes to how we perceive the future of VR experiences. I've watched as the technology evolved and matured, and ultimately, it was mobile that was the true leader for mass adoption. So when the opportunity came up to try out a skateboard inside a VR system, I got on board with Runtastic VR Skates, doing what any self-respecting tech enthusiast would do: I tried it out, took it for a test ride in San Francisco, and had a chance to speak with the brains behind the big reveal. I watched as the tech got closer and closer to perfect and for a while had my doubts. What was once an on-rails demo and a novelty app became an integral part of one of my hobbies. It's not easy to make something that's fun, enjoyable, and easy to use, and Runtastic nailed it with VR Skates. The VR Skates Review The GearVR is a pretty small system that fits snugly on your face, and it's also just a single-purpose console that you strap to your face to get to the virtual world. The system, which will be an easy sell for Oculus fans, isn't perfect and could be improved, but it only gets you started on your journey. But along with its size limitations, there are several benefits to this little system. First off, it was designed to be easy to use. With perfect VR being a distant dream, an on-rails VR experience with subtle movement might be your only way to get into VR. The GearVR does that very well - it fits well, and it's quick to start up and easy to use. As someone who grew up skateboarding (not that I could ever take my body to the rink) it's also fun to try a virtual experience that's more like the real deal. You don't need to go to a skate park or get a bunch of friends together or any of that. Instead, you just strap on the GearVR headset and go at it, completely alone, and with minimal interaction once everything is strapped in correctly. It's easy to use and doesn't take long for the system to set up
