Please note - this game is not supported by the PS Vita, it is only compatible with the PS3. You will use a Dual Shock3, the Cell Broadband or Wi-Fi connection and stereo Bluetooth headsets to experience the exhibition. Features: - Night mode with Augmented Reality to see the exhibition in the dark - Voice activated focus mode for those that are hard of hearing - Binaural Sound for a more immersive experience - PSN required to play the game In spite of strong community demand, we will not be releasing the Seasonal Pass for PS Plus members, even those that have previously acquired the Welcome Back Bonus. The reason for this is that at the moment we do not have an approximate date for the next PS Plus update and we want to be ready with the next patch as soon as we have one. As a reminder, the current PS Plus content dates for the next couple of months are: PlayStation Plus for PS4 Thursday 20th March

What's new in Tales Of Arise - 100,000 Gald 3:

by Ludovico Einaudi Review by Javier Gómez Pérez A tracklist for the upcoming soundtrack album for the new Medieval-made movie Tale of a Gladiator Ludovico Einaudi is famed for his musical work in contemporary cinema, which is largely made up of dramatized musical numbers. Einaudi has composed for Million Dollar Baby, for The U.S. version of Benny & Joon, for Kingdom of Heaven, for Iron Man 2. Einaudi is also known by working in the row of Italian cinema. Here he composed the soundtrack for the movie Tale of a Gladiator after working with composer Aldo Guido Antonini for the Italian version of the martial arts flick The Expendables. A total of 26 songs are featured on the soundtrack. Laconic and stark, the piece is especially nice and calm to the soundscape in action sequences. There are two tracks featuring the main singer (Thea Stemberger, this time more mellow and sweeter than in her earlier roles), and "Odium," the main theme, which might be the best and freshest of the lot. The themes grow on you and are everywhere within the track, all across the octaves. The storyline is an ancient legend from the ninth or tenth century of a gladiator known as Maximus: in the battle with Hun for the title of Emperor of Rome, Maximus' pride and sacrifice are supposed to be the reason of his victory and Anastasius' defeat. During his lifetime Maximus meets Flavia Maximiana, the Empress of Rome, a beautiful but very independent woman who rules the empire with an iron fist. The legend is told chronologically, thus we are able to know the steps of the story: in the present, Maximus' children, Honorius and Flavia, his not living anymore, and Flavia alone now and locked in a fight for her current role as the future Empress of Rome. Ludovico Einaudi: "Take Care of St. Barbara" "New Life" (Crisalide Smith & Ludovico Einaudi) "Take Care of St. Barbara" is a lovely piece where Ludovico Einaudi, in perfect sync with the voice of Crisalide Smith, tries to emulate the emotions of a dying person. The entire song holds a melancholy character. The protagonist is dying,

Google is a huge predator, not a driver of innovation - jonmc12 ===== MalcolmDiggs

Google is a huge predator, because they're a far superior predator than the rest of the tech sector combined, that's why they're so successful. ----- thegayngler What a dumb article. Google is a awesome company with an army of intelligent and creative people. Nothing like having employees to think up something like Wave and to see that it actually works. Google is the greatest place to work when you're young and driven and have lots of autonomy. ~~~ asgard1024 "Google is the greatest place to work..." I would assume that's a complete fallacy of composition, that because a bunch of people have worked at Google, it must be that they are the greatest place to work. Obviously, it's just a single company. (Yes, I know that it's not "just a single company", but the authors probably are not sure what Google's main competitors are.) ~~~ thegayngler Well, true
