Tandem mass spectrometry (MS/MS) is a very powerful technique that allows the characterization of a protein mixture by analyzing the intact mass, the fragmentation of the entire molecule, and the fragmentation of individual peptides. In addition, tandem mass spectrometry is used to identify post-translationally modified proteins or for quantitation of a target protein. In this chapter, the various MS/MS techniques for the characterization of intact proteins and peptides are reviewed. The discussion focuses on the structural characterization, protein/peptide identification, and on the quantitation of proteins and peptides by using the corresponding tandem mass spectrometry techniques.Abnormalities in abdominal wall musculature in repaired tetralogy of Fallot: a useful marker of corrected pulmonary regurgitation.
