off or the concoctions had been used to conceal the theft of others' properties. They all used the rooms that were available to them. Some had personal rooms such as Hunter's who seemed to prefer the company of the campers and some formed groups. Gerard often found himself in a one-on-one game of Cluedo with their leader Hunter. He hadn't realized how much that felt like a mini-adventure to him as a child before he met them. Hunter seemed to think that every day was a new adventure and though he didn't make any effort to disguise it, he was clearly not far removed from some of the other campers who seemed to also care little for how the outside world perceived their place in the universe. Night time was a challenge for the group. They had the night watch so they could keep an eye on their fellow campers and their property and often slipped out to visit the various cabins themselves. It always seemed to be Gerard who was asked to accompany one of them for the night. One time it was a short walk away to the next campsite on the river where Various types of sample analyzers have been proposed for use with liquid samples. These analyzers operate to quickly analyze the particular liquid samples and provide some indication of the type and quantity of the chemical compounds which have been detected, to assist in the identification of the samples. Typically, the particular analyzer includes a reaction chamber for holding or containing the sample and a detection means. In the case of biological samples, attempts have been made to analyze the reaction products produced as a result of using a test reagent to react with the sample. These tests can be used to detect the presence of antibodies or the antigens contained in a particular sample. This technique, however, does not provide an accurate analysis of the types or quantities of the chemical compounds present. Accordingly, it is an object of the present invention to provide an improved device and method for quickly analyzing solid, semi-solid or liquid samples. It is a further object of the present invention to provide a device and method for accurately analyzing solid, semi-solid or liquid samples. It is a still further object of the present invention to provide a device and method for quickly analyzing
