The oldest surviving parts of the cathedral are the choir, apse, and nave of the twelfth-century Romanesque basilica in Saxo, which was later demolished and rebuilt in Gothic. The church was placed in the custody of St. Nicholas' Church, Hamburg in 1500. History The oldest part of the cathedral is the choir of the Romanesque basilica in Saxo. The nave and apse were added in the 13th century, and all of the cathedral was built in the Gothic period. It is one of only two cathedrals in Aalborg (the other being Aarhus Cathedral), and is among the oldest in the country. The church was originally under the deanery of Viborg Cathedral, and the diocese of Aalborg, which is now part of Aarhus, before it was placed in the custody of St. Nicholas' Church, Hamburg in 1500. It later became a temporal possession of the Duchy of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and was moved to the north side of Aalborg Castle in 1535. In 1837 the chapel of St. Nicholas was destroyed in the Great Fire of Aalborg and then replaced with the present church building. In 1848, the church was moved back to its original location within the castle, but the chapel remained in Aalborg. In 1967, the church was returned to Aalborg, and in 1970 the chapel was demolished. The church was listed on the Danish registry of protected buildings and places in 1992. Architecture Aalborg Cathedral has a tower and two apses. A stone tower dates from the early 13th century and was originally attached to the Romanesque basilica in Saxo, which was later demolished in the late 18th century. A second tower was added to the cathedral during construction in the Gothic style, and is visible

I can see the following log: com.google.cloud.logging.projects.v2.Reque
