Once the client connects, it will immediately send an unenciphered protocol version packet. The server will respond with an unenciphered packet specifying whether the protocol is supported and disclose the mutable key part. The server, if applicable, will also identify itself and send an initial opcode obfuscation key for the client. If the opcode obfuscation key is not 0, the client will then shuffle most of its 1st and 2nd opcodes. 5ec8ef588b
