the problem, of course, is that not everyone has windows and it's not exactly easy to use the instructions on the website. also, that website is going to be out of date if a new version of steam comes out or if a new game is released. so you're going to have to do a bit of work to get this working. first, download the steam api from the steam website. you need to download the api dll. you can find that on the steam website. simply go to the api downloads section and choose the dll file that you need. now, the part that some people may not know is that you need to have the original steam dll. to get the original dll, open up your computer and go to c:windowssystem32. in this folder you will find the steam dll that you downloaded from the steam website. place the steam dll in the same folder as the steam api dll that you downloaded from the steam website. the next thing that you need to do is update the game to the latest version. if you're using windows vista or windows 7, you can find that in the steam client. if you're using windows xp or windows 8, you will need to download the game through steam. there are two ways to install the game. the first is to have the game in your steam client. from the main menu, go into your game library and look for the game. click on it and click on install or remove. you can also download the game directly from the steam website. go to steam and click on games. on the steam website, click on the download button next to the game. a window will appear that has the install button. from the steam client, right-click on the game and select open installer. when it opens, you will see the install button in the lower left corner of the window. click on it. 5ec8ef588b
