rosetta video converter can convert your video to mp3. you can watch movies offline, you can convert audio and video files to mp3 with no quality loss. you can even customise the name of your video. rosetta video converter also supports youtube, facebook, vimeo and other popular video sites. some of the coolest features: mp3 support, smoothly converted from nearly any media format, easy-to-use and intuitive interface, pvr capability, compatible with many video editing and transcoding programs, it is very easy to use and the conversion speed is also good (for free version). video converter ultimate videoproc (see above) offers the best results on both quality and conversion speed, but only works with windows 7 and later versions. as with other free converters, it can convert 720p and 1080p video and mp3 audio, but it also offers 3d video, video effects, and screen recording options. it is a simple-to-use application, which means that it gets rid of a lot of the clutter that comes with more advanced free video converters. free programs like to pack every feature they can into the interface, but this often makes the program slow and fiddly to use. while divx can't compete with the conversion speeds and quality offered by paid apps, it is easy to use and has a good conversion speed. divx mp3 converter is a very simple program. however, it is not as user-friendly as some of the other free converters and lacks many of the tools offered by divx. it does support vcd and dvd video files and files that use quicktime format. 5ec8ef588b
