Effect of a state-wide e-prescribing program on physician acceptance and patient use of a hospital Internet web site for obtaining medication information. At the State of North Carolina (SNC) Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS), an evidence-based e-prescribing program (Epi-on) was introduced for use at all community pharmacies. The purpose of the study was to evaluate the effect of the e-prescribing program on physician acceptance and patient use of a state-wide hospital Internet web site for obtaining medication information. Surveys were distributed to physicians at North Carolina medical facilities. Data were collected on physician acceptance of and current use of the e-prescribing program, and the use of the hospital Internet web site. All records of patients who accessed the hospital Internet web site during a 1-year study period were reviewed and patient demographics, clinical condition and medications were recorded. North Carolina residents with known e-mail addresses were recruited and sent a survey via e-mail. Data were analyzed for 1294 patients who accessed the Internet web site from 2003 to 2004. Eighty percent of patients had accessed the web site, while 19% did not. Average time spent on the web site was 19.8 minutes. Patients with known e

Thus, our determination that the petitioner failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination on the basis of sex is not an indication that the fact finder would or should have found discrimination in the case before us. [7] The court rejected the possibility that the inference could be rebutted by showing that the hiring body actually had a reasonable basis for preferring one applicant over another, calling it a "fanciful interpretation" of the Title VII provision. [8] The court also found that the defendant's evidence was sufficient to rebut the presumption of discrimination by showing that the plaintiff was not better qualified for the position than the other employees whom it hired. In light of our holding that the defendant met its burden of production by showing that the plaintiff was not the best qualified person for the position, we do not find it necessary to reach the issue whether a showing that the plaintiff was not the most qualified person for the position could rebut the inference of discrimination. [9] Section 296(4) of the Education Law states, in pertinent part, that: "[T]he determination of the Board of Regents of the State of New York, or its designees, as to whether an individual is qualified to hold a position shall be final and conclusive..." [10] The court did not address the issue of whether the plaintiff could rebut the defendant's showing by establishing that she was better qualified for the position. [11] The record before us is quite unclear as to which position the plaintiff was seeking. As noted in the text, the defendant hired a female for the position of administrative manager at the Westchester Division and it claimed that the plaintiff had been hired for that position. However, the pleadings do not indicate that the plaintiff was seeking the position of administrative manager. In fact, the trial court rejected the plaintiff's claim that the defendant had discriminated against her on the basis of her sex by hiring a female for the position of administrative manager.
