Impact of job control on depression: prospective analysis of the Japan National Health and Nutrition Survey. Although a prospective study of the impact of job control on depression has been reported in a cohort of white-collar workers in the United States, little is known about this issue in a Japanese sample. Job control, perceived job insecurity, and depression were assessed using data from the first (1995) and second (1998) rounds of the Japan National Health and Nutrition Survey, which were conducted in the autumn of 1994 and 1999, respectively. The results of the cross-sectional analysis showed that both job control and perceived job insecurity were inversely associated with depression. The analyses by
